HER SECRET.

Actions Speak for Themselves—He Was Willing to Read Her Mind.

For many years the young woman had called upon Ulysses. She had brought him numberless packages of choice cigarettes, as well as divers specimens of the most expensive cigar, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She had repeatedly purchased tickets for various celebrated prize fights and after escorting him thither would see to it that he had plenty of lemon cream puffs to munch upon during the intervals of slugging. Many and many an evening had she assisted him in increasing the number of his poor hard-working mamma's coal and gas bills, and she had seen four several sets of new springs added to the parlor sofa. But hitherto she had not stood up like a woman and boldly declared her love for him and requested to be allowed to pay all his expenses in the future in consideration of his donning her last name.

But upon this special evening in question Ulysses had her dead thoughts. It may have been the witching golf costume in old gold and baby blue that he wore or the shy grace with which he placed his tiny palm in hers. However, be this as it may, she could no longer restrain herself, but impulsively threw her arms about his frail, shrinking figure and drew him tenderly toward her.

As her lips rose from his she lovingly murmured: "This kiss tells you my secret."

And Ulysses, as he furtively removed some cut plug from his mouth, found an opportunity to observe: "Would you—your—mind—saying—it—over—again?"

HOLD A NET FOR A BEAR.

Drain Makes It Lively for a Couple of Up-to-Date Hunters.

The following is vouched for by a reliable citizen of the locality where the event occurred, near Disco, 12 miles from Black River Falls, Wis., says the Chicago Chronicle. The farmers had been annoyed by wolves and one of them found a den that he thought would hold a dozen or more. Four of them went there with a large fish net, a long tin tube and a double-barreled gun. They had heard of scaring animals from their den by putting a tube in the hole and then shouting through the tube. Two of them held the net over the mouth of the den and another stood ready with the gun, while the fourth one managed the tube. He gave a fearful screech into a funnel fixed in the end of the tube and after an effort or two there was a rush and growl and out came a black bear as though possessed of nine demons.

He plunged into the net and the two men and the bear had a merry time. The man with the gun didn't dare shoot, for he could not tell where there was the most bear and the least of the men. The net broke and let his bearship through and he made for tall timber at a marvelous rate, but the net men looked very discouraged and it will be a cold day when they try it over again. The informant was very reticent about telling who the men were, but as he had a double limp, his face scratched and was in the city for a new suit of everyday clothes it looked as though he knew who helped hold the net.

PRIVATE STREET CARS.

One of the Recent Developments of the Trolley Idea.

One development of the trolley-car idea is likely to be shown ere long in the somewhat general fashion of owning private cars. At present a few, though an increasing number, of rich men own private railway cars. The expense is enormous, all things considered. But a moderate expenditure will suffice in the case of the trolley, says the Boston Advertiser.

Only, in a little while, street cars will no longer be propelled by means of trolley attachments, but their motive power will be applied from an inside third rail, or by means of a storage battery, or, possibly, there will be some method invented of which as yet the public has not even a hint.

Anyhow, the rapid extension of the electrically propelled street car system, not only throughout all cities and considerable villages, but into the suburbs and far away into the country, so that in a long time, where population is even moderately dense, there will be an electrical car line close to every man's front door, will supply the conditions necessary for a vast multiplication of the number of private cars.

Underground City.

In Galicia, in Austrian Poland, there is a remarkable underground city which bears out this description, as it has a population of over 1,000 men, women and children, scores of whom have never seen the light of day. It is known as the City of the Salt Mines, and is situated several hundred feet below the earth's surface. It has its town hall, theater and assembly room, as well as a beautiful church decorated with statues, all being fashioned from the pure crystallized salt rock. It has well-graded streets and spacious squares, lighted with electricity. There are numerous instances in this underground city where not a single individual in three or four successive generations has ever seen the sun, or has any idea of how people live in the light of day.

Nature's Detectives.

When a crime is committed, no matter in what corner of the earth the criminal tries to hide, he knows that probably somewhere or other on the look-out is a detective waiting to lay his hand on him.

When any disease attacks mankind and hides itself in the human system, no matter how obscure or complicated the disease may be, Nature among her great force of detective remedies has one that will eventually hunt down and arrest that particular disease.

Lung and bronchial diseases are among the most baffling complaints which doctors have to deal with; because it isn't the lungs, or bronchial tubes alone which are affected, but every corner of the system furnishes a lurking place for these elusive maladies.

They change and reappear and dodge about the system under numberless disguises. They are almost always complicated with liver or stomach troubles, nervousness, neuritis, or "general debility."

The best detective remedy which Nature has provided to search out and arrest these perplexing ailments is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It lays an arresting hand directly upon the poisonous, paralyzing elements hiding in the liver and digestive organs.

It gives the blood-making glands power to manufacture an abundant supply of pure, red, highly vitalized blood which reinforces the lungs with healthy tissue; feeds the nerve-centers with power, and builds up solid muscular flesh and active energy.

For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, nasal catarrh, bronchitis, severe coughs, asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest cough it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

EASTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE, 230 E. to 234 Temple Court, New York City E. Katz, Agent.

SIXTEEN TO ONE.

It seems that nature in her great laboratory established the ratio or proportion of gold and silver at 16 to 1. The great Comstock mine, which has produced over $500,000,000 worth of gold and silver, yielded about sixteen ounces of silver to one ounce of gold. At the surface gold predominated and the miners, who were working the ground, paid no attention to the black stuff, as they called the silver, being entirely ignorant of its value. As depth was attained the proportion of silver in the ore increased, but in the great bonanzas the proportion of silver to gold was about sixteen ounces to one.

Statistics show that the production of silver and gold in historic times has been about the proportion of sixteen to one. At times the production of silver was much greater proportionately than the gold product. This was the case in Mexico and Peru after the Spanish conquest of those countries. The discovery of gold in California and Australia reversed that condition and for many years the value of the gold mined exceeded the value of the silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

Statisticians say that all the gold produced could be put in a cube of twenty-two feet and that a cube sixteen times as large would contain all the silver taken out of the mines of the world. It requires on an average about sixteen times as much labor to produce an ounce of gold as it does to produce an ounce of silver and it is estimated that every ounce of gold produced in California cost $18 and that every ounce of silver produced in Nevada cost $1.25. The two metals have always been found together in nature, sometimes one predominating and at times the other.

Gold and silver seem, too, to have an affinity for each other. They are nearly always found together in nature.

The richest gold found in the California mines contained quite a percentage of silver. The nuggets brought from Alaska contain about 250 parts silver to 750 parts gold. Though both metals have been used for money from the earliest times and the search for them has been uninterrupted, there has not been enough of both found to supply the requirements of business, and various substitutes have been adopted by different nations.

Notwithstanding the indisputable fact that there is not gold enough to pay the interest, much less the principal, of the world's indebtedness the great bankers and money lenders of the world have conspired to increase the purchasing power of gold by demonetizing silver, thus reducing the volume of primary money, or money of ultimate redemption, one-half. This was not for the benefit of the people, nor was it intended for that purpose. The object was to make money scarce and dear and this it has accomplished, for, as Mr. McKinley said in the House of Representatives before he mortgaged himself to the gold gamblers, "men are poorest when everything is lowest and cheapest measured by gold, for everything is highest and dearest measured by labor." Why the people, who are the sufferers, should submit to the demonetization of silver, thus reducing the value of labor and of almost everything but gold from 50 to 50 percent, when they can remedy the evil at the ballot box, can only be accounted for on the Barum hypothesis that they like to be humbugged and are willing to pay handsomely for having it done effectively.

The strikers at Pittsburg, are still making a determined fight and threaten to bring suit against Sheriff Lowry for obstructing the roads in the Plum and Patton townships. They contend that he has exceeded his authority. The Sheriff says he will not change his methods for a few days and believes by that time the striking miners will have retired to their homes. He claims the cost for deputies has already reached $10,000. It is claimed that notwithstanding the expense the order of court will be rigidly enforced. Mr. De Armit says that if the campers do not leave he will petition the court to issue attachments for contempt. The Sheriff has said, however, he would not interfere with the campers, but they will not be permitted on the highways. The coal operators are waiting for a reply from President Ratchford in answer to their telegram asking for a conference to see if the strike cannot be settled by arbitration. The operators will wait till Monday and if no reply is received new men will be imported and the mines will be started up at once. Edward McKay, who is in charge of the campers at Turtle Creek, said yesterday that the miners had no fear of labor being imported. The miners' officials at Columbus have prepared a statement that the time has arrived for the united action of labor organizations. It has not been delivered as yet. In West Virginia the strikers are gaining strength in the Norfolk and Western districts and have made up for losses in Fairmount and the Kanawha Valley.

Hart T. Galvin of Redding started for Coffee Creek last Tuesday and on the way decided to try his luck in Yankee Gulch. In two hours he panned out $50.50, the largest nugget being worth $5.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

Wheat ran up to $1 in the New York markets yesterday and at Philadelphia it reached the $1.02 mark, and a $1 mark at Minneapolis. At Chicago 98 cents was the highest.

A railroad from Juneau to Dawson is one of the early possibilities. Next spring 5,000 men will be employed and the work will continue night and day till the road is completed in the fall.

The Grand Jury at San Jose yesterday presented an indictment against Dan Dutcher and Mrs. Schofield, charging them with the murder of Mr. Schofield. Next Monday morning was set for arraignment.

The Hillside railroad wreck near San Jose is reported to have been caused by a broken brake-beam, and will prove an expensive one for the company. Carloads of flour, hay and general merchandise are in a confused mass and mixed up with petroleum.

W. Russell Ward of Santa Monica, who recently eloped with Mrs. John Bradbury of Los Angeles, was arraigned before Judge Cook of San Francisco yesterday on a charge of adultery. His attorney moved to set aside the order of court holding the defendant to answer, but the matter went over until next Thursday.

It is announced that the national labor leaders at their meeting in July laid the ground work for a national political movement against injunctions in labor troubles and that it will be put in operation in next Fall's Congressional election. All recognize that the courts have been the chief weapons of the operators in the present contest.

President McKinley and party arrived in the City of Troy, N. Y., yesterday morning. The occasion of his visit is to attend the meeting of the Army of the Potomac. Over 8,000 visitors are already in the city. The President and party visited several points of interest and witnessed the great parade, which was the largest ever seen in Troy.

Michel Angiolillo, the assassin of Canovas del Castillo, the Spanish Prime Minister, on August 8th, was executed yesterday by the garrote. When told to prepare for the execution he took it calmly, but complained bitterly of the frequent visits of the priests and declined to enter the chapel. Just prior to the moment of execution a priest exhorted him to repent, but he replied, "since you cannot get me out of prison, leave me in peace. I myself will settle with God."

A GREAT FEAT.

The Mesa Encantada Explored at Last.

After Many Years of Conjecture the Truth Concerning the Famous Rock is Now Positively Known.

For the first time in the history of man the celebrated Mesa has been mounted. The honor belongs to Prof. William Libbey, of Princeton university, New Jersey, and the fact has been scientifically established that the summit is uninhabited, and, as far as the party could discover, has ever been. There were absolutely no traces of animal life.

It may be that new specimens of flora have been found that existed in the prehistoric world, but sufficient examination has not yet been made to determine this fact. The Mesa Encantada is said to be the only spot on the face of the globe where the flowers of the period of long ago can exist without the contamination and war of plant life with the world of the present day.

Prof. Libbey succeeded in making his much-talked-of ascent of the encantada a few days ago. The trip to the summit was fraught with great perils, and the result is of little value from an archaeological standpoint.

The party consisted of Prof. Libbey, H. L. Bridgeman, of Brooklyn, and the correspondent of the Times-Herald. Every preparation had been made for the ascent, there were great kites and balloons ready for use, but it was decided to throw a line across the top of the Mesa with a gun, borrowed for the purpose from the United States life-saving service.

The first shot was too low. The second, carrying a steel wire, went over the summit, but took two days to draw the cord which was attached to a longer rope over the rough, rocky surface of the spot described by Coronado in his report to the king of Spain nearly three centuries ago as being the strongest natural fortification in the known world.

When the ropes were made fast a look was arranged, and a great chain of boards, 20 feet across, was fastened to it. A huge rock was sent to the summit without tipping, and then Prof. Libbey made the ascent. It was dangerous, exceedingly so. As the professor came close to the summit he had to hang on by one hand, while with the other, he disengaged the ropes of the chair, which had caught in the rough rocks. The remainder of the party then made the ascent, and were assisted on the surface by the professor.

Next a great difficulty presented itself in the form of a gaping chasm. This was crossed on the ropes, and the ten acres of the surface of the rock were explored by the daring scientists. They spent the entire day there, searching for the evidences of the village, said to have existed 300 years ago, but there was nothing to indicate that it ever had existed in reality. There were monuments of rock, such as the Indians built in the ages that have gone by, but that was all.

There were some pools of water that had collected, but whether they were worn by the action of small particles of rock carried by the winds or whether they were in reality constructed by the Acoma Indians in the centuries that have gone down into the silence of the past is not known.

Search was made for the bones of the human beings whom the legend of the haunted rock describes as having been starved to death there, but they were not found.

It is assumed by botanists that this great rock, which rises over 700 feet from the surface of a desert of sand, protruded out of the ancient sea that covered this section of the world in the distant past, and that the flora is the same to-day as it was in those days, when the world was young and of which history has no account. Specimens, such as there were, were collected, but whether they belong to this day and age or to the realms of the prehistoric world is not known.

This rock, enchanted or haunted, as it has been called by the Acoma Indians, has been the center of scientific interest for years. Numerous attempts have been made to mount it, only to be doomed to failure.

The legend of the Indians is that the summit of the rock was once reached by a natural ladder in a pillar. On this place the old and decrepit were kept to shield them from the attacks of hostile foes, while the men were in the valley at work. Once a great torrential rain came, like a cloudburst, and ate away the sandy foundations of the pillar, which fell, and the inhabitants on the rock, several hundred in number, starved to death.

It has even been asserted that the place was inhabited, and the ascent by the Libbey party was made to set at rest the rumors and determine once and for all whether or not the stories as told were true.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Anyone who has ever picked up with a bare hand a piece of intensely cold iron knows that the touch burns almost as badly as if the metal were red-hot. Indeed, the action of great heat and extreme cold are so similar that a Hungarian chemist has turned the latter to account to prepare meats for food. He subjects the meat to 60 degrees of frost, and then seals it up in air-tight tin cans. The result is that the meat, which is practically "cooked by cold," will keep any time, and can be eaten with very little further preparation.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

H. C. Cutting, State Superintendent of Schools, arrived from the East yesterday morning and continued on to Carson.

Henry Riter has just received a lot of new music for his regina and takes pleasure in giving his patrons an opportunity to hear it.

The People's Saving Bank at Mount Pleasant, Michigan, closed its doors yesterday and is in the hands of the Bank Commissioner.

An examination for the railway postal service will be held here on October 4th. Applicants should govern themselves accordingly.

The tickets for Miss Mabel Stannaway's concert are now on sale. It will take place next Friday, the 27th. Give the young lady a good house.

The lunches at the Granite Saloon cannot be excelled and the beer is served ice cold. A choice stock of wines by the bottle or gallon.

Mrs. R. Sadler, the wife of Governor Sadler, took the V. & T. train yesterday morning for Carson. The lady had been visiting relatives in Grass Valley, California.

Read the Porteous Decorating Company's new advertisement in to-day's issue. Any one contemplating the renovation or repapering a house for Winter cannot do better than call at Porteous.

The Granite Saloon is a quiet and pleasant place of resort. Cool beer is a specialty. Choice wines are sold by the gallon or in quantities desired, also liquors of all kinds.

C. Novacovich will handle the Kane Brothers' of Coloma, Cal., celebrated fresh fruits. Ladies who contemplate putting up fruit for the Winter will do well to call and order their supply.

The Steamboat Springs property will be sold on reasonable terms or rented to a responsible tenant. See 50-cent advertisement in another column or address James T. Davis, Mound House.

Call at Muller & Stumpf's Pabst agency for fine California and imported wines for family and medicinal purposes. Sherry, port, muscatel, angelica and all dry wines by the gallon. Open every day until 8 o'clock.

A. Nelson will sacrifice his stock of furnishing goods in order to make room for new goods. Now is the time to get bargains. Call at his store on Virginia street. Free employment office connected with the store.

H. Gosse of the Riverside proposes to accommodate his guests in superior style and the new annex will afford ample room for all. He is a progressive man and believes that Reno should have at least one "up to date" hotel.

Emma Bedford, a noted character of the Comstock, claims that she was robbed of $300 worth of diamonds on Wednesday night. The Chronicle writes up the story in such a manner that it leaves the impression that Emma's diamonds only existed in her imagination, or that possibly two or three jolts of booze had made her rich.

By a birth notice in to-day's issue it will be seen that the wife of Mr. P. Sobraut presented him with a daughter. A remarkable coincidence connected with this family is that this is the fourth child, all girls, and each was born on Friday. Should the number reach 13 superstitious people would have something to talk about.

James Johnson and wife of Long Valley have been in Reno for a day or two purchasing material for the completion of their new residence, to replace the one recently destroyed by fire. Mr. Johnson reports splendid crops in his section and that the farmers generally are gratified at the outlook for good prices for their hay and grain.

Virginia seems to have a dog nuisance similar to Reno. It is not generally noticed, but it is nevertheless a fact, that one of the surest signs of a dead town and the gradual disintegration of a community is its drive of mangy snapping canines. A stranger coming into a community notices this very quickly, while the residents pay little attention to it. It is about time that Reno should make a move in this matter and see that this nuisance is squelched.

PASSED AWAY.

General Orlando Evans Solves the Mystery.

At an early hour yesterday morning the spirit of General Orlando Evans took its flight from its earthly home and a long and useful life was ended. In the death of General Evans, not only this community, but the world has lost a true and conscientious man. A man who was an exemplary citizen, a good neighbor and a faithful public servant. In his dealings with his fellow men he has always been the soul of honor and in his sympathies for those who have been unfortunate or seemed to him to have more trouble than their share, he has been charitable, both in opinion and in purse, ever ready to aid and assist by word and deed where he could relieve the suffering or misfortunes of others. Thus his long life has been spent, often denying himself comforts and pleasure and even the opportunity of fortune, when he believed such denial would accrue to the benefit of another. Nearly every man, woman and child in this community, as well as in every other he had lived, knew his kindly face and were always sure of a kindly greeting when or wherever they met him. Although his declining years weighed heavily upon him, and Dame Fortune had deserted him, he was uncomplaining and kept up his busy life until the sands had run so low that only a few grains were left in the glass that measured his hours, barely enough in fact to give his only daughter time to reach him and say farewell.

He had not been well for sometime, but with the indomitable will that was a part of his character, he kept up until some two weeks ago before taking to his bed and from that time until death came to his relief his vitality rapidly ebbed, notwithstanding the best of medical attendance and the kind ministrations of loving relatives.

General Orlando Evans was born in Washington, DeKalb county, Ohio January 22, 1818, being the eldest of eleven children. In 1838 he was married to Miss Louise Woodward. Two children were born to them, only one of whom lives, Mrs. Bennett A. Pryor of Colusa, California, and who was present and helped to soothe the last hours of her aged father. In 1851, among the early adventurers of that day, he came to California, since which time he has resided in various places in that State and Nevada, always active in upbuilding the new States and assisting to make the rough frontier and deserts blossom as the rose and bear the fruits of industry, that those who were destined to come later might enjoy that which had been planned and provided by the early pioneers. At one time he was a wealthy man and has been comfortably off several times, but his liberal and open hearted nature and his belief that money was to be used for the happiness and comfort of humanity, prevented him from retaining the wealth which he frequently could have obtained and accumulated and in consequence but little remains. In public life, he was an accomplished and efficient officer, having served a term as County Clerk of this county, a four-year term as Postmaster of this city and as Deputy Assessor for several years, and in which capacity he was serving at his death.

Death came to him peacefully, at his brother Alvaro's residence. Loving hearts and hands were near by to soothe the pangs of parting and watch the passing of his spirit from its house of clay to the God who gave it.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Bennett A. Pryor, two grand children, three brothers, Alvaro, J. N. and A. A. Evans, a sister, Mrs. Arrowsmith, and several nephews and nieces to mourn his loss. The funeral will take place from the residence of J. N. Evans at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

ALASKA INDIANS.

Three Distinct Classes and Their Peculiarities.

The Indians of Alaska may be classified for the purpose of this article into the Indians of the settlement, the Indian of the interior and the Indian of the far north. The former are half-civilized, half-christianized, the outcome of much labor and perseverance on the part of missionaries and the influence of an indolent life about towns and trading posts. The Indian of the interior is an essentially different creature, a product of Alaska's own composition. He resembles the Indian of our American States in one way and then again there is such a diversity as to cause one to wonder at making the comparison. We might call him a cross between his sea-coast brother and his confrere of the Arctic Circle, the regulation Esquimaux. He is a good natured fellow when you know him well but on first acquaintance is apt to appear sullen and surly, as though he were impugning your right to the pleasures and pains of this work-a-world. A small gift of some bright material, a kind word, or some little attention or flattery and he is at your feet ready to do your slightest bidding. The outward appearance of these men of the North is, to say the least, hideous. Nature endowed them with a short, stocky head and neck, prominent cheek bones, protruding lips, large mouth and small, glittering, vindictive eyes, but, through the perseverance and industry of native artists, their faces have become so seared and seamed with tattoo-marks and bone ornaments, that they resemble the horrible and demoniacal wooden war masks more than the faces of human beings. The Alaska Indians, men, women and children are addicted to tattooing and, to the Indian mind, these marks of beauty together with a certain corpulence and breadth of beam are the most positive indications of refinement and culture. Then, too, they have a custom of piercing the lips and cheeks and inserting bone and ivory ornaments, called the "to-took," in the holes, giving, at first sight, the impression that the teeth are protruding through the flesh.

As a rule both men and women are active and industrious. The former are great hunters and persevering fishermen and spend much of their time in those occupations. The women, when they are not tanning hides or sewing on fur clothes, spend their time in weaving baskets and mats. Some of the work done by these native basket weavers is really wonderful, the patterns being quite intricate and the coloring of the grasses so delicate as to make them highly prized by tourists and curio seekers. The men are addicted to the use of tobacco and are inveterate smokers, but the manner in which they indulge themselves is really worthy of mention. Instead of puffing in smoke and then exhaling it, these venerable gentlemen are accustomed to "swallow it whole," so to speak, and in consequence six or seven puffs so befuddles their senses as to throw them into a maudlin state of intoxication.

It is, however, when we come to the Indians who frequent the settlements, the savage with a veneer of civilization, that our interest is more excited. He is a peculiar conglomeration of native indifference, filth and cunning, combined with a frankness and intelligence gained by constant association with the whites. Town life has turned his instinctive tendency toward laziness into a passion and engendered in him an inordinate desire for whisky, or, as he calls it, "fire water," or any thing else that will burn or tickle his native palate. All the teachings and perseverance of local missionaries have been ineffectual in eradicating this intense desire for spirituous liquors and the Indians themselves are extremely frank in confessing their failing. I remember the case of a distinguished divine, who was travelling in our party, and a conversation he had one evening on the wharf at Juneau with one of our dusky friends. After vainly endeavoring to start a conversation he at last essayed the remark, "Are you a Christian Indian." "The native seemed quite hurt at such a question and folding his blanket diedainfully around him said with a growl, "Humph, naw, me whisky Injun."

The Indians, though not possessed with an over abundance of wit and humor, have a faculty of expressing themselves in odd moments in ways which are peculiarly apt and unique. One enterprising fellow had the audacity to climb into the engine room of the steamer and was found there later on looking distractedly about, by the Chief Engineer. On being asked what he thought of the place, remarked, "Too muchum wheel, makum too muchum think." As a rule, however, whatever shrewdness they possess is consumed in laying traps for the unassuming and inoffensive tourist. They throw the wharves offering all sorts of ridiculous and outrageous articles for sale and when the price is asked it is never less than, "Sitkum dollar," fifty cents. It costs the poor traveler "Sitkum dollar" almost every time he turns around. Some of the trinkets offered for sale are eagerly sought for by curio seekers, especially the gold and silver ornaments. The native gold-smiths have quite a genius for carving and their work is often worth the price paid for it. Their best work is done on the far famed totem poles. These poles are made by removing the bark from a good sized fir tree and carving faces and figures upon the wood. A totem pole tells the history of an entire family. It is, in truth, a family Bible in which all the important events, the successes and victories, are depicted in the signs and symbols carved in the wood. As one might imagine, they are quite expensive and only the "quality and big Indians" are allowed to sport them in front of their dwelling houses, for they are emblems of opulence and power.

There is one thing more without which no account of the Alaska Indian can be complete and that is a description of the semi-periodical fandango or war dance. This function which begins in a most solemn and ceremonious manner and ends in a perfect pandemonium of dancing, howling and shouting. To start the ball a rolling feast is spread that is, the large wooden troughs, used in lieu of China dishes are heaped with fish and other promiscuous foods, and then the entire company falls to with fingers and horn spoons till the troughs are licked clean. Then the fun commences. The younger men have bedecked themselves in all manner of grotesque costumes. Naked to the waist and glistening with oil, some are clothed in furs of the bear, others in that of the walrus and seal, while a few, covered from head to foot with the down of the elder duck, wear enormous, hideous masks of wood, painted in such loud and glaring colors as the morbid fancy of the wearer may suggest. At a signal the drums are started and the dance begins, and from this moment on the scene defies description in any civilized tongue, a howling, moving, squirming conglomeration of arms feet and legs.

Shepherd Dogs Compete for Honors as Herders.

A Society in France Which Has for Its Object the Improvement of This Breed of Dogs—Rules of the Contest.

For two years there has existed in France a society known as the "Club du Chien de Berger Français," which is devoted to the improvement of the breed of shepherd dogs in that country.

It is seconded in its efforts by the ministry of agriculture, and its work has been of such a nature that shepherds and drovers take more than a little pride in possessing membership in it.

The dogs used in France for guarding and driving flocks and droves differ considerably from the Scotch collie.
Two of the principal breeds cultivated there are known as the dogs of Beauce
and of Brie, the country of the fragrant
"fromage."

The dogs of Beauce have a rough coat, sharp nose, erect, pointed ears,
and something of a wolfish appearance. Those of Brie have long, shaggy hair which conceals their eyes and to a great extent the form of their limbs.

As both these localities are at no great distance from and on opposite sides of Paris the greatest rivalry exists between them.

The club held its first competition last year in the neighborhood of Chartres
and the second was held just a month ago at Angerville, a village in the department of Seine et Oise, on the plains of Beauce, where shepherd dogs are numerous and which are easy of access to the drovers of the stock yards of La Villette in the northern suburbs of Paris.

In judging the dogs entered in competition their points of beauty and the purity of breed are first considered, and then follows the most interesting part of the competition, the conducting of a flock of sheep over a prepared course by each dog entered. This contest is described by a writer for L'Ill-
ustration:

"At half-past 12 the procession starts from the town hall of Angerville for the proving ground, two mounted gen-darmes opening the line of march, followed by the Ophonic society" (the name with which brass bands dignify themselves in French villages). "Then follow the spectators and the competitors, conducted by their masters."

"The route over which the sheep should pass without deviation is traced on the plain by two furrows turned by a plow, and marked from place to place
by small stakes floating tricolored pen-nants."

"In the park at the commencement of the course is a large drove of sheep which are to play their humble role in the spectacle."

"Each shepherd is required to drive
a group of 15 sheep over the course, which has been made difficult by barriers, ditches and hedges, and it is the duty of the dog to see that none of them wanders from the flock."

"The troop should pass over all obstacles, climb the hillocks, descend into ditches and pass between the hedges which form a choked passage in a compact band from which no sheep should be allowed to separate itself."

"Amusing incidents are not lacking.
Of the 32 dogs entered few succeed in conducting their 15 sheep safely to the goal. Wild chases over the plain and between the feet of the spectators are frequent. More than one of the shepherds, exasperated by the stubbornness of the sheep before the obstacles, seizes the leader by the tuft of wool at the nape of the neck known as the 'chignon' and drags him through the difficult passages, thus inducing the remainder of the stupid band to 'follow
like sheep.'"

"The best dogs are those who do not become nervous or excited, but by their calmness and by taking their time prevent the scattering of the flock."

"A good shepherd dog should not nip
the hind legs of a sheep, as a cut from his sharp teeth may spoil the shank, which furnishes the most salable cut of mutton, but should seize the animal
by the 'chignon.'"

After the trials of driving, the sheep
are placed in hurdles, and a competition of placing and separating into lots is held, and the day is terminated in a fete in the village with illuminations, merry-go-rounds, dancing, and like amusements.—N. Y. Herald.
